Returning Red Cross Nurses Tell of Cholera Panic in Harbin

Bartlett.

"Five Red Cross dectors and myself were rushed to Harbin from Vladivestok last August when the cholera broke out," she recounted yesterday. "They were Drs. Johnson, Fields, Westervelt, Watt and Allison. Dr. Johnson died during the epidemic.

The first American women to arrive in Washington from Visdivostok, since that city was captured by the Bolsheviki, have reported to Red Cross headquarters here. They are Miss Vashta Bartlett.

They are Miss Vashta Bartlett, Gaithersburg, Md. Miss Mary B. Bethel, Cape May Courthouse, N. J.; and Miss Charlette Boardman Regers, New York City. All are Red Cross nurses.

How a tiny Red Cross detachment stamped out a cholera epidemic in Harpin, in northers Manshuria, is the story brought back by Miss Bartlett.

"We worked day and night, hand-ling over 500 cases a week for tar weeks among the Bussians and Chin Premises goods which had been placed in charge of the Chesapeake would stand around the bed of a patient while we were injecting a saline State Court for the Eastern District plague.
